About

BIOGRAPHY

Eric Brown is a board certified family nurse practitioner with Goshen Orthopedics. He provides treatment options for patients with degenerative joint conditions, such as arthritis. He also treats patients with injuries to bones, muscles, tendons and ligaments, including sprains, strains, fractures and dislocations.

Eric has extensive experience with pre- and post-operative care in surgical units, including at Goshen Hospital. He works closely with orthopedic surgical teams to manage care in the operating room and meet each patient's specific needs before, during and after surgery.

Family time keeps Eric busy when he is away from work. As part of a voluntary mission trip, he helped establish a medical clinic in Ecuador that provides health screenings and education for residents in the rural community.

PHILOSOPHY OF CARE

Eric's goal is to treat each patient with compassion and respect. He enjoys getting to know patients and working with them to build a treatment plan that fits their preferences. Education also is key to Eric's approach to care. He helps patients understand their condition and what to expect from treatment options.
